

Best product wins. Seems to me that's the way this country was built, why stop now?

XM has a better product. A product so much better I'm willing to pay for it every month. Why should they, as well as the consumers and voters that listen to XM be penalized for having a better product?

I've seen radio deteriorate with all the consolidation in the industry and giants like Clear Channel acquire more stations in markets and the quality diminish.

Today I have a choice and I'd like to keep that choice. I'm willing to pay for the superior product and I shouldn't lose that choice. XM offers the service I'm looking for at the time I want it with their Instant Traffic and Weather.

Should I have to sit in my car in the parking lot for 10 minutes before I leave waiting for a traffic report on Clear Channel before I decide which route to take home? Doesn't make sense to me.

Just leave the better product alone. If they cease to become the superior product let the consumers vote by walking away from their subscriptions.
